NEILL'S NECK BROKEN.

The Poisoner of Young Girls Pays the Death Penalty.

His Remarkable Nerve Renders the Hangman's Work Easy.

Bled in the Corridor of Newgate—His Career of Crime.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Thomas Neill, otherwise Cream, the murderer of Matilda Glover and several other girls, paid the penalty of his crimes at 9 o'clock this morning. Although officers were issued directing that the execution should be strictly private, the representative of the Associated Press was permitted to enter Newgate Prison, where Neill has been confined, shortly before 9 o'clock the authority to hang Neill was handed over by the High Sheriff of the County of London to Hangman Billington, in accordance with the legal form.

THOMAS NEILL, ALIAS CREAM.

As he appeared in court.

At 8.57 Billington, accompanied by an assistant who carried the pinioning material, entered the cell of the condemned man, where he found the prison chaplain ministering to Neill.

The procession to the gallows was headed by the Chief Warden, who was followed by the Chaplain, who read the burial service of the Church of England. Neill came next, guarded on each side by warders. He walked bravely. A deadly pallor overspread his features, but his face showed no other trace of emotion. Close behind him walked the hangman.

On arriving at the scaffold the white cap was pulled down over his eyes. Billington then guided him to the guillotine, beneath the crossbeam, from which a rope with a hempen noose at the end was dangling. The white cap was then drawn down so that it covered the chin, rendering it impossible for Neill to see the final preparations for his death.

These took only a few minutes. His legs were pinioned with a strap that was fastened below the knees. The noose was then dropped over his head and adjusted around his neck. The ring was fixed behind the left ear. In another second the executioner stepped a pace to the rear, pressed a lever and the trap fell.

Neill's body dropped five feet into a pit. Billington and the other persons who saw the execution concur in the opinion that death was instantaneous. There were convulsive twitches of the muscles of the back and limbs, which lasted a few seconds, and then the body lay motionless.

The body was cut down at 10 o'clock and a case of the head was then made. At noon a jury returned a formal verdict that death had been caused by a fracture of the neck.

The body was buried under the flagstones in the corridor, through which Neill had passed a short time before on his way to the guillotine. The body was buried under the flagstones in the corridor, through which Neill had passed a short time before on his way to the guillotine.

On the night of April 11, Alice Marsh and Emma Shrivell, aged respectively twenty-one and eighteen years, received a man in their apartments at 118 Stamford street, Lambeth, thirty after he left the house the two girls were found lying face down by the landlady. The Marsh girl died on the way to the hospital, and the Shrivell girl died three hours after she was admitted.

It was learned that they had been poisoned with strychnine.

The coroner in charge of the case received a letter from a woman named Sabatini, who said that she had been engaged to marry, saying she could give information to show that the two girls had been poisoned by a young man in which he remained about the same time the coroner received the letter Dr. Harper, of Harnham, also received a letter, sent by Neill, in which he demanded the sum of £1,000, under penalty of showing that Dr. Harper's son had poisoned the Marsh and Shrivell girls.

On a charge of attempted blackmail, Neill was arrested. It was discovered that Neill was a man of considerable means, and that he had been engaged to marry a woman by the name of Sabatini.

Neill, although he was described as an American, being in England in order to meet a sister of the United States, was a Canadian.

Neill, or as he was known in Canada, "the Young Cream," studied medicine at McGill College, Montreal, and was graduated in 1876. He took his degree in medicine at McGill, and had been there only a short time before he was suspected of illegal practices.

Neill was arrested on a charge of killing a woman by an illegal operation, but the charge could not be proved.

He had been in Chicago but a short time in 1878 when he was convicted of causing a woman's death by malpractice and sentenced to imprisonment for life. He served thirteen years, and was released on account of ill-health. In the mean time his father had died, leaving him £10,000, and he went to England with this money.

A MURDER AT HOMESTEAD.

One Non-Union Workman Shot and Killed by Another.

The Police Investigating a Singular Early Morning Tragedy.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 15.—One non-unionist shot and almost instantly killed another early this morning in a bank-house of the Carnegie steel works at Homestead. The murderer is Max Newman, and the name of the victim is supposed to be Maynard.

About 2 o'clock the occupants of the house behind the fence were aroused by hearing two shots fired, followed by a cry of alarm and then death-like stillness.

The police began a search. While they were thus engaged a man walked into the watch-box of the mill police with a revolver in his hand.

"I want to give myself up," he said. "I have shot a man."

It was Newman, and he conducted the officers to his lodging-house, where the most inanimate form of a man was lying on the floor.

"There he is. I think he is a striker," said Newman.

A physician was hastily sent for, but when he reached the mill the unfortunate man was dead.

On being searched a mill pass and a check found on his person indicated that he had been a millworker, but none knew him except one non-unionist, who said he had seen the dead man working in the yard gang, and thought that his name was Maynard.

Newman came from New York and has been working in the 32-inch mill. He says he was assaulted while asleep, and believing that his assailant was a striker, he fired and killed him.

No one knows the cause of the assault. Newman was held to await the verdict of the Coroner's jury.

WANT THE SHERIFF'S RETURN.

The Burkhalter Failure Again in the Court.

Motion was made before Justice Ingraham in the Supreme Court this morning by Dill, Chandler & Seymour in behalf of creditors of the late firm of C. Burkhalter & Co. for an order compelling the Sheriff to make return of certain executions against the firm still in his hands in order that an equitable action might be begun for the purpose of enabling creditors to reach equitable assets.

These executions represent about $250,000. Justice Ingraham declined to hear further argument this afternoon.

Lawyer van Sicklen, in behalf of B. T. Burkhalter, the Durham Manufacturing Company, creditors of C. Burkhalter & Co., has obtained from Justice Ingraham an order directing the way to the Sheriff's return. The Burkhalter and several of their creditors should not be examined in court in regard to the assignment.

The order is returnable Thursday morning. The creditors want to remove the assignment and have the issue of fraud.

VICTIMS OF A FATHER'S CRIME.

Wife of a St. Louis Embroiderer Asks to Have Her Children Cared For.

Mrs. Sarah B. Abrahamson appeared with three small children before Judge Duffy in Essex Market Court to-day and asked that the two children be placed in a charitable institution until she could find work.

Her husband, Benjamin Abrahamson, was convicted of embezzlement in St. Louis, and escaped his jail pending an appeal. Since then his family has not heard from him.

Agent Deitz, of the Gerry Society, who was directed to investigate the case, reported that he had found the family in a tenement in New York. The children were in good health, and the mother was able to support them.

After the ceremony at the church, Mr. Cravath's family moved to the new residence at 155 West Fifty-eighth street, where a wedding breakfast for 125 friends had been prepared. On their return from their honeymoon they will live at the same residence, and will be "at home" to their friends on Dec. 14.

DR. STAEHLIN AGAIN.

Mrs. Gildersleeve Charges Him with Extreme Brutality.

She Was Taken Ill on a Third Avenue "L" Train.

Says She Was Roughly Handled by the Ambulance Surgeon.

Ambulance Surgeon Edward Staehlin, of the Chambers Street Hospital, who has obtained no little notoriety during the last few weeks through the complaints made against him by alleged abused and mistreated patients, is again accused, this time of brutally choking and torturing a woman.

Dr. Staehlin's alleged latest victim is Mrs. George Gildersleeve, the young and pretty wife of a milkman living on the fourth floor of the apartment-house at 208 East Forty-fourth street.

She is confined to her bed to-day, suffering from the effects of an attack of hysteria, which seized her on an "L" train last night, and also from a sore throat and pains in her leg, for which she claims Dr. Staehlin is responsible.

With her unmarried and younger sister Mrs. Gildersleeve was last night returning from the former's home at Bayonne, N. J., where she had spent the day.

About 10 o'clock they boarded a Third Avenue train at City Hall.

Mrs. Gildersleeve has been in poor health for weeks and of late has been subject to attacks of hysteria.

The train had scarcely started when she fainted away, and at Chambers Square the guards carried her, unconscious, out on the platform.

Mrs. Gildersleeve's sister and another woman followed. No sooner had Mrs. Gildersleeve regained consciousness than she became hysterical.

One of the "L" employees summoned an ambulance, and shortly afterwards Policeman Charles Germerhauer, of the Elizabeth Street station, put in an appearance.

A doctor's hospital ambulance responded, but Mrs. Gildersleeve refused to go to the hospital, and insisted on being taken to her home.

Meanwhile, Policeman Andrew J. Hendry, of the Madison Street station, arrived. Mrs. Gildersleeve's sister and another woman tried to shift the responsibility of the case on to the other, and finally they decided to take the case to the police.

But to Policeman J. T. McCarthy, of the Eldridge Street station, who was at Canal street and the lower end of the train, the case was referred.

Meanwhile Mrs. Gildersleeve's condition was becoming alarming. Well-meaning people had bathed her face with water, and her hair and clothing were bedraggled and wet.

Policeman McCarthy finally arrived. A bystander insisted that another ambulance be sent for.

But, although Policeman McCarthy claimed that the case belonged to the police, he did not know why he wrote the "dynamite" letter to Brower Hanks, unless it was to his mortgage holders.

It is not known to what extent Staehlin has carried on his swindling operations, but from letters found on him it is thought that he has operated largely among various grocery stores in New York.

NOT A DYNAMITER.

Newark Police Say Teale Is Only a Clever Swindler.

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 15.—The developments to-day in the case of William P. Teale, who was arrested here yesterday on the supposition that he was a dynamiter, prove that the man is only a clever swindler and that he had no part in the "dynamite" schemes to extort money under false pretences.

Teale was held for trial this morning and will be taken to the Hudson County Jail. He was identified to-day as a man who had been out of $250 last September.

Teale's case is a variation of his numerous schemes to extort money under false pretences. He has been arrested several times.

This was Prohibition day in the County Clerk's office. That is, the Prohibition candidates at the recent election filed their sworn statements of campaign expenses. It didn't cost any of them very much.

Congressman W. Bourke Cockran says he paid out nothing. Additional surrogate-elect Fitzgerald paid $5,000 to the Tammany Finance Committee and $500 to Martin H. Brown.

Jacob Hauger, Republican candidate for Alderman in the Seventeenth, $57, and J. C. Crawford, Republican candidate for Alderman in the Twenty-sixth, $100.

MONCTON, N. B., Nov. 15.—"Jim," the pal of "Buck," who is now awaiting execution at Dorchester for the shooting of Officer Steadman, has confessed that he and not "Buck" fired the fatal shot.

"Doe," when the prisoner says himself, is a notorious name, and he still declines to reveal his identity.

Although a strong array of evidence, mainly based on "Jim's" own former admissions, fairly agreed with the present statement, Rev. Father Corbett has caused it to be forwarded to the Minister of Justice, with a request for an order preventing the execution of "Buck."

SUED FOR CAMPAIGN PRINTING.

An Establishment Attached to $10,000, but C. N. Bliss Will Pay.

The establishment of the Republican National Committee's printers, the Brodix Publishing Company, at 49 and 51 Rose street, which was attached by the Sheriff yesterday, was still in charge of the Deputy this morning.

Sheriff Gorman received assurances early to-day that a bond for the amount of the attachment, $10,424, would be furnished before evening.

Treasurer Cornelius N. Bliss, of the Republican National Committee, is a party to the litigation, and it is understood that he and other officials connected with the party management will see to it that the bill is paid. The correctness of the claim is not disputed, but the committee has no money to settle it with.

The attachment was granted at the instance of Freeman A. Bliss, of 40 West street, who furnished the printing materials to the Brodix Company. The Brodix Company is a branch of the Bliss family, and it is understood that this city last August to do the printing.

It is said that the National Committee's printer, when he was indicted, had a $10,000 bond, which he had used to pay for the printing of the party's platform.
